

Contributions and Other Expenses

Throughout the year, América Móvil's operations made contributions and incurred expenses related to lobbying activities, interest representation, and other similar purposes, as well as to trade associations or tax-exempt organizations.

It is important to clarify that our Integrity and Compliance Program prohibits spending on political contributions. We do not make monetary contributions to political campaigns or organizations, lobbying groups, trade associations, or other tax-exempt groups with the intent to influence campaigns or legislation. However, we do make annual payments as part of our membership in business chambers such as ANATEL and GSMA, as well as other industry chambers in the countries where we operate.

Four of our subsidiaries—Claro Colombia, AMCO, Claro Puerto Rico, and A1 Austria—engage in lobbying efforts to monitor bills that may arise in their local legislatures with the potential to become law. These efforts support their relationships and participation in various ways alongside the industry in legislative processes, allowing the company's position—whether in favor or against such measures—to be included. It is important to reiterate that these contributions are not intended to influence public policy.
